Introduction to the EFP

In a time of volatility and uncertainty, senior public sector executives are facing constantly shifting priorities and increasing demands. More than ever before, it's vital for you to develop the leadership, management and strategic skills you need to lead high performing teams.

The Executive Fellows Program (EFP) challenges senior public sector executives to develop new leadership perspectives in a highly interactive setting while exploring contemporary issues, such as the post-COVID environment, social movements, civil unrest, and preparedness amidst the global spectre of war.

The EFP is not just any executive leadership course. The EFP puts you in the 'room' with fellow public sector executives from across Australia and Aotearoa New Zealand, expanding your professional network and creating an opportunity to learn from the experiences of other jurisdictions. You will benefit from lively, interactive online sessions, including online sprints and offline reflection which can be done at your own pace – all tailored to fit around the lives of busy public sector executives.

You will learn from a cast of renowned academics and senior public sector practitioners from Australia, Aotearoa New Zealand and around the world, in a program designed to help you take the next step in your career. The EFP alumni includes more than 200 public sector leaders who have gone on to hold roles as CEOs or Secretaries (equivalents) or deputies after completing the program.

Develop a greater sense of who you are as a leader and how you can shape organisational change to deliver public value to the communities you serve.

“The EFP gave me an in-depth understanding of change and how to manage change and some of the models around that – which is good because I’m taking my brand new organisation on a change journey. The whole experience gave me time to step out of what I was doing and step into the bigger picture of the public sector and the global situation.”

Ro Allen

What is the EFP?

The EFP is a highly respected program designed exclusively for senior public sector executives. It provides you with a unique opportunity to develop your ability to lead and learn alongside your peers from across Australia and Aotearoa New Zealand.

The three-module online program is delivered by world-recognised academics and high-calibre practitioners.

You will be encouraged to share your personal leadership experiences in a creative and collaborative environment, and you will be able to at once apply what you learn when you return to work.

The EFP has evolved to embrace the online environment, creating a dynamic and interactive learning experience where participants learn from presenters, and their peers, in short engaging sessions designed to maximise the positive impact on day-to-day work.

The EFP features:

- > short, sharp interactive sessions including a mix of teacher-to-participant sessions, participant-led sessions, group work, immersive elements and facilitated panel discussions
- > three modules designed to provide you with an opportunity to immediately apply what you learn between modules when you return to work
- > opportunities for self-reflection, action-learning groups exploring solutions to your leadership challenges and leadership-in-practice workshops
- > practical frameworks and techniques, immersive learning cases and live policy challenges.

If you're searching for a public service leadership course, executive leadership training or looking to build high performing leadership qualities, the EFP is the program for you.

Who is the EFP for?

The EFP is designed for high performing leaders and senior public sector executives, such as Deputy Chief Executive Officers (CEO), Deputy Director-Generals and Deputy Secretaries, and executives two levels below CEO, Director-General or Secretary. The program is also suitable for senior executives in the not-for-profit sector, international equivalent levels and other experienced, high-performing senior leaders.

Why should I choose the EFP?

ANZSOG is a unique education provider. Our programs are designed for the public sector, with input from governments across Australia and Aotearoa New Zealand, and they are led by renowned academics and respected practitioners. Our programs are tailored to meet the needs of public sector leaders who face distinct challenges in today's volatile environment.

The EFP is modelled on global executive leadership courses, but adapted for the specific challenges of the contemporary public sector.

By taking part in the EFP, you will build a long-lasting network of fellow public sector leaders from across Australia, Aotearoa New Zealand and beyond. You will also join the ANZSOG alumni, which includes thousands of public sector leaders.

You will benefit from strategies, frameworks and an international perspective, which are needed to effectively lead across cultural boundaries and in an increasingly complex, virtual/digital operating environment.

The EFP focuses on the capabilities successful public sector leaders need to thrive in this environment, exploring:

- > the interactive dynamics they face
- > how to better respond to competing requirements
- > how to frame discussion, planning and strategic actions.

What will I learn?

The EFP focuses on three key leadership themes:

- > leading the self and others (including neuroleadership)
- > leading an organisation (including adaptive leadership)
- > systems leadership.

These themes are explored using contemporary issues as a focal point, including the post-COVID-19 world, social movements and civil unrest, as well as preparedness in the face of the global spectre of war.

By exploring contemporary issues, participants will benefit from engaging and relevant learning opportunities with real-world application.

The EFP leadership framework underpins the themes, content and teaching methods of our program, highlighting the capabilities required of a successful leader.

Outcomes

“The EFP was valuable for me because it was the first time in some years I had spent time investing in my own management capacity. I am a more reflective leader as a result of having been on the EFP and having been able to engage with other people in senior positions about the way they approach difficult problems.”

Grahame Morton

Throughout the program, you will explore the three leadership themes outlined on the previous page. Outcomes from these themes, include:

- > explore the latest thinking on leadership
- > discover leadership frameworks which can be applied immediately in your agency
- > develop a greater sense of self-as-a-leader
- > build skills to effectively lead across cultural boundaries in an increasingly complex operating environment
- > broaden and deepen your professional networks
- > gain deeper insights into the operating environment of the public service with particular attention to politics, the media, the international sphere and other sectors
- > increase capabilities in reading and shaping organisational cultures
- > find inspiration and opportunities to take your leadership to the next level
- > learn how to better communicate in your relationships with ministers, staff and stakeholders, to create and deliver public value

EFP faculty

Our faculty include leading national and international academics who are experts in the public sector. We also draw on the expertise of senior practitioners from the public, not-for-profit and private sectors.

Professor Catherine Althaus, ANZSOG Deputy Dean (Teaching and Learning), and ANZSOG Chair in Public Service Leadership and Reform, University of New South Wales Canberra (Extraordinary Professor, University of Pretoria and Adjunct Professor, University of Victoria, British Columbia and Griffith University)

“We’re recognising that leadership is not just a professional activity – it’s something that we need to embody, and it’s holistic – and we are very committed to that in the delivery of this program.”

Catherine Althaus

Robin Ryde, former Chief Executive UK National School of Government, and leadership and organisational development expert.

“People that join the EFP are very experienced public servants – they’re looking at a period of time in their career when they can really make a profound impact. The EFP provides them with an opportunity to soak up experience and knowledge, and to return to work with a renewed energy.”

Robin Ryde

History of the EFP

The EFP has been educating public sector executives since 2003 and continues to be one of ANZSOG's highly-respected education offerings, attracting high performing leaders from across Australia and Aotearoa New Zealand.

The EFP has continually evolved and in recent years has been delivered as an intensive and lively three-week residential program for senior executives to develop their capacity to lead.

The three uninterrupted weeks provided a rare opportunity for focused learning and reflection for busy senior executives.

The program emphasised immersive and experiential learning, and was delivered in three cities across three countries by world-recognised academics and high-calibre practitioners.

Due to the impact of COVID-19 and current approach towards managing responses to the pandemic, EFP 2023 has been redesigned for online and blended delivery.

Importantly, the 2023 program emphasises the engaging elements of the previous version of the EFP, creating a dynamic and interactive learning experience where participants learn from presenters, and their peers, in short engaging sessions designed to maximise the positive impact on day-to-day work 2023 EFP participants will benefit from lively, interactive online sprints and offline reflection (which can be done at their own pace).

These sessions are tailored to fit around the lives of busy public sector executives.

The online delivery method of the 2023 EFP also provides access to world-recognised academics and high-calibre practitioners from Australia, Aotearoa New Zealand and beyond.

How to apply?

Applications for 2023 are now open. Apply now or for more information, submit an expression of interest or email: programs_team@anzsog.edu.au.

If you work for the governments of Western Australia, New South Wales or Victoria, please contact your department or agency's Human Resources or Learning and Development team about your application or expression of interest.

If you work for the Northern Territory government, please contact the Office of the Commissioner for Public Employment at swpd.ocpe@nt.gov.au about your application or expression of interest.

If you work for the Aotearoa New Zealand government, please contact Lynn Evans at the Leadership Development Centre at LDCProgrammes@ldc.govt.nz about your application or expression of interest.

If you work for the Queensland government, your Public Sector Commission has a limited number of scholarships available for the program. If you would like to be considered for a scholarship via your jurisdiction's Public Sector Commission, we encourage you to contact them for further information including dates for application submission. You are also welcome to make your own arrangements with your agency.

Information for managers and sponsoring agencies

Owned by and working for the governments of Australia and Aotearoa New Zealand, ANZSOG creates and delivers education programs tailored to meet the needs of public sector leaders. Our programs are designed with significant government input, for government, and led by renowned academics and respected practitioners.

Who should I nominate?

The EFP is designed for high performing senior public sector executives, from Deputy Chief Executive Officers (CEO), Deputy Director-Generals and Deputy Secretaries, and executives two-levels below CEO, Director-General or Secretary. Executives looking to take the next step in their careers or further their leadership capabilities will thrive in the EFP. We encourage you to nominate Māori and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples, people with disability and those from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds.

For more information about the suitability of your candidate/s, please complete the Expression of interest form or email: programs_team@anzsog.edu.au.

Investment

The sponsoring agency, jurisdiction or organisation pays the program costs, which includes tuition fee and program materials.

Shared learning

You will have opportunities to apply new insights immediately to your workplace and are encouraged to share what you learn with others. The module delivery provides opportunities to apply your insights into your workplace while completing the program. The EFP deliberately invites managers into the learning environment at several points to witness the insights that have been gained and to share cross-jurisdictional learning.

We encourage sponsoring managers to facilitate opportunities for participants to share and add further value as a result of their studies.

Frequently asked questions

Please see below for frequently asked questions relating to ANZSOG's Executive Fellows Program.

What are the entry requirements?

When do applications open?

Applications are now open. Apply now or express your interest and we will contact you for the next iteration of the Executive Fellows Program. Applications for EFP 2023 close on 20 March 2023.

How much does the program cost?

The program costs $24,679 AUD + GST and travel costs.

When will I/my agency be invoiced?

Once you submit your application, it will be reviewed by the selection committee and you will be advised as soon as possible of the outcome. Once you have received formal acceptance into the program, your organisation will be invoiced. Payment of the program fee must be received in full prior to program commencement.

What is covered in the Program fee?

The fee includes all program materials, teaching faculty and facilitation, and access to the School's learning management system to support program participation.

7. What is the cancellation policy?

Places for EFP are limited to ensure an engaging environment for participants, as such, places are hotly contested. However, once you have been accepted into the program, cancellation will only be considered in exceptional circumstances due to the difficulty of filling places at short notice.

Cancellations must be advised to ANZSOG in writing by the sponsoring agency at programs_team@anzsog.edu.au. Cancellations received more than 14 days from commencement will incur a 50% charge of the program fee. The full program fee is payable for cancellations received within 14 days or less from commencement.

What is the program structure?

Can I speak with a previous EFP participant?

If you are interested in applying for EFP, we encourage you to speak to our EFP alumni to get an insider's perspective. Please contact our Alumni Coordinator via email at: alumni@anzsog.edu.au, to arrange an introduction.

You will become part of the alumni community upon completion of the program. Our Alumni Program helps you to maintain and build on your peer-to-peer relationships, creating a broad community of public sector leaders from across Aotearoa New Zealand, Australia and internationally. This provides an opportunity for ongoing learning and support from peers, greater exposure to different perspectives, and an appreciation of work done, and solutions found, elsewhere.

Do I need to download any software to participate?

Yes, you will need Zoom installed on your device. It will do this automatically when you click on your first webinar so just login 5 minutes before and allow it.

What is the time commitment of the program?

The next instance of EFP will be delivered entirely online with three modules held over a period of three months. Sessions vary in duration and may occur outside of business hours in some instances (until 18:00 or 19:00 AEST).

Can I self-fund my participation if my agency won't fund?

Yes.

How is the 2023 EFP different to previous EFP iterations?

The EFP has continually evolved and in recent years has been delivered as an intensive and lively three-week residential program for senior executives to develop their capacity to lead.

Due to the impact of COVID-19 and current approach towards managing responses to the pandemic, EFP 2023 has been redesigned for online and blended delivery.

You will benefit from lively, interactive online sessions, including online sprints and offline reflection which can be done at your own pace – all tailored to fit around the lives of busy public sector executives.

You will learn from a cast of renowned academics and senior public sector practitioners from Australia, Aotearoa New Zealand and around the world, in a program designed to help you take the next step in your career.

What are the attendance requirements?

As a participant, you are expected to attend all sessions to fully realise the benefits of the program.

Do I need managerial approval to attend the program?

Yes. In submitting the application form, you confirm that your manager agrees to support you to participate in the program and that your organisation will pay the full program fee if your application is successful. Your manager will also receive a copy of your application via email.

How big is the cohort?

A maximum of 65 places each year are available for each instance of the program. A selection committee will assess each applicant's level and experience and, where possible, seek a balance of jurisdictions and departments.

What are the program (learning) outcomes?

Throughout this program, you will explore three key leadership themes: leading the self and others, leading an organisation, and systems leadership.

Outcomes from these themes, include:

- > explore the latest thinking on leadership
- > discover leadership frameworks which can be applied immediately in your agency
- > develop a greater sense of self-as-a-leader
- > build skills to effectively lead across cultural boundaries in an increasingly complex operating environment
- > gain deeper insights into the operating environment of the public service with particular attention to politics, the media, the international sphere and other sectors
- > increase capabilities in reading and shaping organisational cultures
- > find inspiration and opportunities to take your leadership to the next level.

Can I use FEE-HELP to pay all or part of my tuition fees?

No unfortunately you can't use FEE-HELP. You may enter a salary sacrifice arrangement with your employer to attend the program. Your employer will be billed the program fee. This will be discussed on a case-by-case basis with your sponsoring agency.
