About ANZSOG

The Australia and New Zealand School of Government (ANZSOG) was founded by government, for government and is a leader in delivering education programs and government-focused research that lifts the quality of public sector leadership in Australia and Aotearoa New Zealand. We work with our 10 owner governments and 16 university partners to educate, enrich, inspire and connect people across our jurisdictions and the Indo-Pacific.

Part of our work is building public service capability in First Nations Public Administration, and ensuring public services are culturally competent. Ways of working with First Nations peoples are undergoing a transformation and public servants working in all areas of public administration must change their thinking and upskill, in order to engage successfully with First Nations peoples for improved outcomes.

About the conference

First Peoples to All Peoples: Partnerships, devolution, transformation and sharing will be held 1-3 March 2023, Brisbane Convention Centre and online. ANZSOG has partnered with the National Indigenous Australians Agency (NIAA) to deliver the conference. ANZSOG's First Nations Conferences are unique gatherings that deepen public sector understanding of the value of First Nations knowledges and cultures, and their importance to public policy.

First Peoples to All Peoples will be the fourth ANZSOG First Nations public administration conference and will be delivered in person with an affordable virtual option to maximise accessibility. ANZSOG will host over 600 delegates in person and an unlimited number of online participants over three days. Approximately 21 prominent First Nations Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and Māori speakers, and four non-Indigenous speakers, will share their insights and experience of how transformative approaches that include First Nations knowledges, perspectives and values, can serve the wider public and First Nations interests.

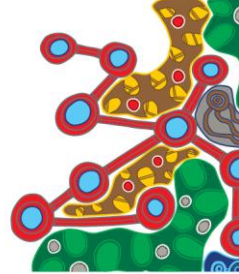

First Peoples to All Peoples will examine First Nations policy through the lenses of Australia's National Agreement on Closing the Gap commitments, particularly the four Priority Reforms, as well as the New Zealand Public Service Act 2020, which now clearly sets out the responsibility of the public service, particularly its leadership, in strengthening the Crown's relationship with Māori under the Treaty of Waitangi.

Conference discussions and breakout 'yarning sessions' will explore four key themes: formal partnerships and shared decision-making, building the First Nations community-controlled sector, transforming government organisations, shared data and access to information.

A virtual attendee hub and conference app will provide attendees with easy access to the program, speaker information, livestreams, sponsor profiles, Marketplace stall info and more.

Attendees will also have opportunities to build connections via a network reception, during catering breaks, a conference dinner and at the Marketplace .

Further details of speakers and the full conference are available on conference webpage.

Conference Marketplace

$500 + GST

A Marketplace will be set up adjacent to the auditorium where the conference program will be delivered, primarily for organisations interested in sharing information, and for local First Nations artists to sell products and artworks during the session breaks.

All stall holders will also receive an online presence in the virtual Marketplace on the virtual attendee hub (for attendees attending virtually).

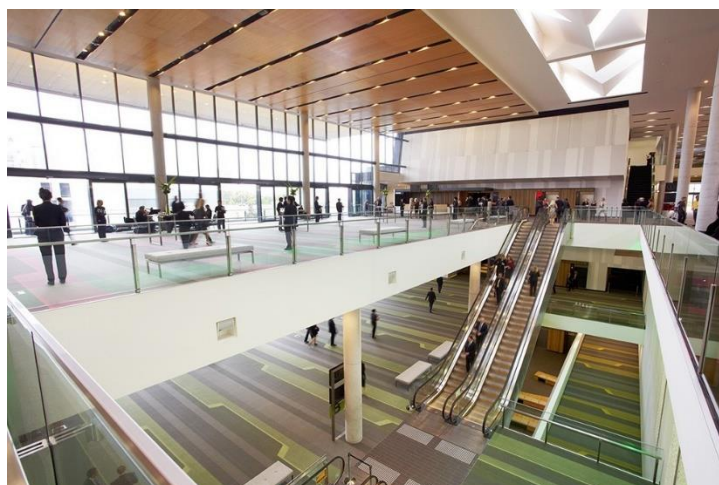

Located immediately outside of the main auditorium and where conference catering and registrations will take place, stallholders can be assured of high traffic exposure.

A Marketplace stall includes:

1. One stall at the conference Marketplace for the duration of the conference.
2. One dressed trestle table; 2 x chairs; 1 x 4-way power board (including connection)*.
3. Online stall holder profile in the conference app and virtual attendee hub. Stallholders will have the ability to:
  - include a logo and provide links to a website and social media.
  - upload videos and files,
  - communicate via the hub directly with attendees who may request information or wish to schedule a virtual meeting

**Additional AV or other setup requirements are available at the stallholder's cost*

We recommend that items at your stall (especially any items of value) are packed away overnight and stored in a secure room at the venue. We suggest you bring a large wheelie suitcase or boxes to pack up these items at the end of each day.
