Professional Learning Program

New Managers

Fulfill your potential as an impactful leader.

Progressing from a team member to a management role demands growth and evolution. Taking a team-wide view, balancing big picture strategy with everyday operations and navigating a range of different styles and perspectives can make for a challenging transition.

That's why this purpose-built development program for first-time managers is a valuable resource. It'll help you build skills and practical strategies to excel as a manager, while connecting with peers in similar stages of their careers from a range of different government settings.

Start your management career on the right foot

This program is specifically designed for first-time managers, giving you the opportunity to begin your management role on strong foundations.

Small classes for more personalised learning

Cohorts in this program are limited in size to ensure we can address your individual needs and the real-life challenges you're facing.

Cover the fundamentals of good management

Learn how to build engaged teams, develop productive stakeholder relationships and work with greater influence at senior levels.

Learn from a leader in the field

New Managers is facilitated by leadership educator and contemporary adult learning practitioner, Hamish Alexander.
